“I can feel (the yarn), tied around my neck and my waist. It’s a tingly feeling.”

Jono Brandel, fourth-year Design Media | Arts student

Design | Media Arts students encourage others to join their celebration of the birth of the Internet Monday, creating a yarn network to represent the connectivity of the Web. The first connection of two computer nodes, a packet switch between Stanford Research Institute and ARPANET at UCLA, occurred on Oct. 29, 1969.
