- Under Finances and Reports, my home would be listed as “Schedule B - Multi-Dwelling Unit Residential Customers”, with further parameters as such:
“Schedule B applies to two (2) or more dwelling units served by one meter.”
- The total charges per hundred cubic feet (HCF) of metered water (one HCF equals 748 gallons) for Schedule B customers are” roughly 4-6 grand per pay period which is per month.
- Water is extraordinarily expensive in Los Angeles. It also seems to be similar for businesses and homes. Paying for water is a major expense in many people’s lives.
- The research question now becomes: Who were the rich people designing this system? How did their money flow? More importantly – what were the major names involved in water when Los Angeles was established? Did any of them do business at the National Trust and Savings Bank in Hollywood? Where did the accounts move from? Is that building still present? How/Who do I contact to get this information? What routes did it take to get there? What infrastructure? What infrastructure ~

Traffic, Transit, and Infrastructure of Things

I captured so many images of traffic. There are fields of parking lots. The oil is pretty cheap. Hollywood is a truck stop, in many many ways.

Interview people on the street

Interview store-owners

Interview my own family

- Police department records
  - o Are you more likely to be arrested if you are a resident?
  - o What are the majority of crimes?

Do demographic/census research

- When did Armenians come to Hollywood?
- When did Jews come to Hollywood?
- How has the Mexican-immigrant population changed?
- How has the Chicano movement been rooted here?
- Who were the people that came with the film industry vs. the people that came

Light

The light in Los Angeles, Hollywood, is famous. This is because

- Of the hill that it is located in
- Of the latitude/longitude?

What movies has the bank appeared in?

Money Flows

What conclusion can I draw about the money flowing though Cahuenga and Hollywood?
What happens when you convert a money oasis to a literal oasis by pumping water into it?
