The Jumpstart Our Business Startups (JOBS) Act passed Congress with bipartisan support and was signed into law by President Obama in April 2012. The measure is designed to encourage small business and startup funding by easing various federal regulations. It allows businesses to accept small contributions from private individuals — also known as “crowdfunding” — without making an initial public offering. But unlike most crowdfunding options, the JOBS Act gives regular people a chance to become investors.

WHAT IS THE JOBS ACT?

Key provisions of the JOBS Act:

- A company can raise as much as $1 million a year from individual investors.
- Investors whose net worth or annual income is $100,000 or less can invest a max of $2,000 or 5% of their income (whichever is greater).
- Investors whose net worth or annual income is $100,000 or more can give 10% of their annual income.
- A company can only sell to investors through a middleman — a broker or website — that is registered with the SEC. The middleman can only sell shares that have originated from the company.
